

MEDIA RELEASE FORM

Working with the local farming community on the Dingle Peninsula, the Corca Dhuibhne Inbhuanaithe/ Creative Imagining project will creatively explore how farming can play an important role in acting on the climate emergency. It is one of 15 new projects being funded by Creative Ireland's Creative Climate Action fund.

The project is managed by Corca Dhuibhne Creativity & Innovation Hub, in collaboration with the Green Arts Initiative in Ireland (GAIL) and MaREI (The Science Foundation Ireland Research Centre for Energy, Climate and Marine). Lisa Fingleton is the embedded artist for the project and will work closely with the partners and farmers to develop the process.

This project aims to leave a legacy that will inspire other farming communities and engage with the wider public. This collaborative and creative process with farmers will be documented throughout, using photography, video and other media forms as they evolve over the duration of the project.

I hereby grant consent to be filmed/photographed/interviewed as part of the the Corca Dhuibhne Inbhuanaithe/ Creative Imagining project. I am aware that the images/film/other media forms, may be displayed and distributed by the artist, partner organisations and funders through events, online media, TV or in print now and in the future. They may be circulated to the press and other news media for promotional purposes. Copyright of the images remains with the artist. I understand that my name will be credited as appropriate.
